HIV-positive and struggling with bills

Hand to mouth.

Every month, Wanda Hernandez decides which bills she can pay.

Having lived for 15 years with HIV, Hernandez, 50, has chronic pain blocking her from work. But the largest chunk of her disability assistance goes toward the $1,000 rent for her one-bedroom in the Bronx, near Arthur Avenue.

"I have to choose between paying my Con Ed or my rent, basically," she told Metro.

She is one of many HIV patients who have to use more than 70 percent of their disability income on rent, according to a new study by VOCAL-NY, which helps people with HIV/AIDS, and the Urban Justice Center's Community Development Project.

As a result, thousands become homeless, unable to afford rent checks, the report said.

Study organizers say that a state bill would protect them by ensuring they pay no more than 30 percent of their disability income toward affordable housing.

"Those living with HIV/AIDS should not have to choose between their medication and housing," Assemblyman Robert Rodriguez said.

After rent, Hernandez has about $340 monthly, she said, or about $12 a day — scraped together for food, utilities and unexpected expenses. Con Ed shut off her lights last week, she said, and she faces a hearing this Tuesday about possible eviction.

Rebello was killed at

A Daily News investigation of a Brooklyn narcotics officer and his team has spotlighted a troubling pattern of behavior that has cost the city more than $1.5 million in settlements even while the officer in question was promoted.

NYPD lieutenant Daniel Sbarra and members of his team have been hit with nearly 60 lawsuits, nine of which are still pending. At least 15 of the cases involve Sbarra specifically, with charges ranging from racial profiling and slurs to the unprovoked brutal beating of a man, whose son was watching.

Hate. Village murder highlights increase in city anti-gay crimes

"You wanna die right here?"

The man had been following Marc Carson and a companion down a street of Friday-night revelers, police said, hurling anti-gay slurs and eventually pulling out a gun. But this was the West Village, blocks from the birthplace of the gay rights movement — a safe place if ever there was one, and friends told the New York Times that 32-year-old Carson was out and proud.

"Is that your boy?" the gunman asked Carson.

"Yes," Carson replied. The man shot him in the face.

The brazen murder has stunned a city known for its tolerance. Police Commissioner Ray Kelly called it a "hate crime" and City Council Speaker Christine Quinn vowed New York City would not go back to a time when same-sex couples were afraid to walk the streets.

Police identified the perpetrator as Elliot

City to double funding to train teachers

Education. NYC will double its funding for teacher training beginning this June, Schools Chancellor Dennis Walcott said.

Officials have set aside about $100 million to help prepare students for the new Common Core standards that were introduced earlier this spring. The Daily News reports.

The city spent about $50 million on teacher training last year.

Principals will have access to the funds starting next month, Walcott said. They can choose how to spend the money as long as it helps students prepare for the tougher academic standards. Ways to spend the money include adding teacher training sessions or buying classroom materials.

"Doubling down like this is a significant step," said Walcott.

A portion of the funds

Doubling down

"It will build the strength and capacity of our teachers to deliver everything we expect of them."

Walcott

will also help schools prepare for the new teacher evaluation system that the state will impose on city schools June 1.

Assembly Speaker Sheldon Silver said he would recommend expelling Lopez from the legislature.

Lopez was censured after sexual harassment allegations surfaced. Last week, a new report detailed his alleged behavior, including accounts of incidents with women who worked for him.

Gov. Andrew Cuomo said that the situation required "a zero-tolerance policy."

The National Organization for Women released a statement saying he should be expelled "to ensure a sexual predator is removed from office."

Council Speaker Christine Quinn told the Times his candidacy was "one of the most offensive things I have ever seen happen in New York City politics."

Stray bullet kills teenager on bus

A 14-year-old girl was killed by an unknown gunman Saturday night as she rode an MTA bus in Queens, police said.

Daja Robinson had just boarded the Q6 bus on her way home

Two teenage female friends of the victim were with her at the Crisis. Training push fails to halt military sex assault scandal

Under pressure to fight sexual assault, the U.S. armed forces in recent years rolled out education programs about proper sexual conduct through methods like role-playing and video games.

The increase in education has nevertheless failed to prevent what the nation's top general called last week "a crisis" after the Pentagon reported a 37 percent jump in the estimated number of sexual assault cases in 2012.

Moreover, the military suffered deep embarrassment when personnel who worked on preventing sexual assaults were themselves accused of sex crimes this month.

On Friday, Defense Secretary Chuck Hagel gave top brass a week to come up with a plan for discussing the problem with all troops and ensuring proper training and credentials for those who deal with new recruits and sexual assault victims.

Education campaigns teach service members basics like how to make sure the other party is a willing participant in intimate contact, or how to step in as a bystander if an alcohol-fueled situation looks like it could lead to inappropriate conduct.

The Army is in the fifth year of its "I Am Strong" sexual assault prevention campaign, under which all new soldiers are drilled on a set of 10 "sex rules." REUTERS

N Korea fires three short-range missiles

Bellicose. The "Hermit Kingdom" ignores calls for restraint as regional tensions escalate.

North Korea fired three short-range missiles from its east coast on Saturday, South Korea's Defence Ministry said, prompting Western powers to urge Pyongyang to exercise restraint.

Launches by the North of short-range missiles are not uncommon, but after recent warnings from the communist state of impending nuclear war, such actions raise concerns about the region's security.

"North Korea fired short-range guided missiles twice in the morning and once in the afternoon off its east coast," an official at the South Korean Defence Ministry spokesman's office said by telephone.

The official declined to speculate on whether the missiles had been fired as part of a drill or training exercise.

A Japanese government source noted the three launches, but said none of the missiles had landed in Japan's territorial waters.

Tension on the Korean peninsula has subsided in the past month, having run high for several weeks after the United Nations Security Council imposed tougher sanctions against Pyongyang following its third nuclear test in February. The North had for weeks issued nearly daily warnings of impending nuclear war with the South and the United States. REUTERS

President to address controversial stances

Activists stand on Pennsylvania Avenue during a protest outside of the White House. / GETTY IMAGES

Stances. The president will go to the podium to explain his stances on Gitmo, drones and al Qaeda.

President Barack Obama, under fire for security lapses at a U.S. mission in Libya, will in a speech on Thursday lay out his wide-ranging counter-terrorism policy, from the controversial use of drones to efforts to close the U.S. military prison at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba.

Obama's use of military drone aircraft to attack extremists has drawn fire and increased tensions in countries like Pakistan and been criticized by human rights activists in the United States.

His inability to follow through on a 2008 campaign pledge to close the Guantanamo Bay prison has been dramatized by a hunger strike among many of the terrorism suspects being held there.

And the resurgence in recent weeks of questions surrounding the deaths of U.S. ambassador to Libya Christopher Stevens and three other Americans in an attack on a U.S. facility in Benghazi, Libya, last year has put Obama on the defensive.

In his State of the Union speech early this year, Obama pledged to work with Congress to make certain that the U.S. targeting, detention and prosecution of terrorism suspects was consistent with U.S. law. REUTERS

Bad tracks. Officials look at fractured rail in Conn. train crash

A fractured segment of track has been found on the rail line of a Metro-North passenger train from New York that derailed in Connecticut and struck another commuter train, injuring more than 70 people, investigators said over the weekend.

Authorities have ruled out foul play in Friday's collision, which occurred during the evening rush hour between the towns of Bridgeport and Fairfield, about 50 miles northeast of New York City.

Further examination is necessary to determine if track damage found at the site of the accident was a cause or effect of the train wreck, but that stretch of rail line had undergone repair work during the past month, officials said.

"We don't yet know whether the fractured train track caused the accident, or was caused by it," Earl Weiner, a board member for the NTSB.

White House warns against IRS scandal 'fishing expedition'

Not on the hook.

President refuses to cooperate in measures that distract from "the real issues at hand."

President Barack Obama will not cooperate in a "partisan fishing expedition" over who knew what and when about revelations that groups seeking tax-exempt status were subject to extra Internal Revenue Service scrutiny.

"We are going to work with Congress, as the president said, in legitimate oversight," Dan Pfeiffer, a senior adviser to Obama, said yesterday on ABC's "This Week With George Stephanopoulos" program. "What we're not going to participate in is a partisan fishing expedition designed to distract from the real issues at hand."

The controversy over the agency's selective screening of anti-tax groups has stirred Republican attacks on President Barack Obama and emerged as a distraction to his second-term goals of revising U.S. immigration law and reaching a long-term debt-reduction deal. Pfeiffer, who also appeared on other television talk shows, said the White House would cooperate with Congress in probes while urging them be bipartisan.

Four congressional committees and the Justice Department are investigating the matter. Hearings held next week include one by the House Oversight and Government Reform Committee with testimony from Douglas Shulman, the IRS commissioner from March 2008 to November 2012.

The scandal erupted May 10 when Lois Lerner, the IRS's director of exempt organizations, apologized at a tax conference for singling out certain groups for further examination of their tax-exempt applications. REUTERS

Report: Yahoo board approves $1.1B purchase of Tumblr

AllThingsD reported yesterday that Yahoo's board approved a $1.1 billion all-cash acquisition of microblogging site Tumblr.

ATD had earlier stated the board would be meeting yesterday to consider the acquisition. Yahoo plans to announce the acquisition on today, according to "numerous sources."

"We don't comment on rumors or speculation," a Yahoo spokesperson told VentureBeat yesterday.

Yahoo has scheduled a mysterious event for this morning in New York to announce "something special." However, the event was announced before the board reportedly confirmed the acquisition.

If it pans out, this would be Yahoo's largest and perhaps riskiest acquisition since former Google executive Marissa Mayer assumed the chief executive job. By one metric, Tumblr hosts 51 billion blog posts, a number that grows by 74 million new posts each day. REUTERS

New Xbox hopes to be more than just console

Technology.

Microsoft plans to role out its new system with more diverse uses.

Microsoft is set to make a splash this week with the eagerly awaited unveiling of its new Xbox console, eight years after the last version, as it seeks a larger share of the $65 billion a year global computer gaming industry.

The small device faces some big competition from the PlayStation 4 by Sony and the Wii U by Nintendo in a shifting market.

Gamers are gravitating to online play — suggesting the heyday of console games are over — while Microsoft wants its sleek new toy to cross the bridge to the mainstream and become the family's entertainment center.

Features

Microsoft will be aiming for many markets at the same time, from the core and casual gamer to the TV watcher and music fan.

- Industry watchers expect Microsoft to integrate the new Xbox much more closely to the TV and cable or satellite box.

"Core gamers are very hungry for a new machine but the difference between 2005 and now is that the stakes are so much higher," said Ryan McCaffrey, executive editor at entertainment website IGN.com. "The entire Xbox experiment from Microsoft was for it to be the center piece of your living room." REUTERS

Colleges are figuring out ways to fill empty seats, which could work out well for students. / GETTY IMAGES

Empty classrooms. Colleges scramble to fill empty seats

Many leading U.S. colleges and universities face a shortfall in enrollment for fall classes and will offer price discounts as they compete for students in an ever expanding higher education market, according to Forbes.

The magazine highlighted 50 public and private U.S. colleges listed in the Princeton Review's

"Best Colleges" list that are still accepting students in their 2013 freshman classes.

In their scramble to fill empty seats, colleges will likely offer tuition discounts in the form of grants, Forbes said.

"There are many more colleges in the United States than is economically viable," wrote Matt Schi-

Average tuition and fees alone at private, nonprofit four-year institutions rose $1,173 or 4.2 percent to $29,056 in 2012-13, according to the College Board. The National Association of College Admissions Counselors counts 288 colleges nationwide that reported having space for incoming freshmen this fall. Most schools listed offer scholarships to at least 90 percent of incoming freshmen, with some schools' average grants exceeding $20,000. REUTERS

Too broad a brush: How a minority is getting a voice

Race. A new book says that the Asian-American Pacific Islander community isn't getting a fair shake.

For nearly a decade NYU professor Robert T. Teranishi has researched the disparity in college achievement and opportunity between racial groups. But a glaring problem in the data on Asian-Americans and Pacific Islanders has begun to emerge over the last few years.

The category is simply too broad, masking serious disparities within the group. Teranishi recently collaborated with two like-minded researchers — Samuel D. Museus and Dina C. Maramba — to create an alternative book of scholarship on the subject, "The AAPI Experience: New Insights on Asian Americans and Pacific Islanders and the Implications for Higher Education."

"There certainly are some AAPI subgroups in the U.S. that have high educational attainment,

By the numbers

59.6%

In 2007, 59.6 percent of all Asians in the United States 25 to 29 years old had a college degree. But only 18 percent of Native Hawaiian/Pacific Islanders of the same age had a degree. The AAPI designation combines all of these groups into the same category.

but that masks what's happening to a number of other struggling subgroups, whose needs are being overlooked, because of the perception that all Asians are doing well in college," says Teranishi.

Featuring over a dozen top AAPI scholars in the U.S., the book features empirical research on many oft-overlooked experiences within the AAPI designation — from Asian evangelical Christians to Hmong Americans, and a myriad of others.

"A lot of scholars are starting to see how AAPI students are misunderstood and overlooked when it comes to policy debates. How we think of these groups has real effects on how we create campus services and programs," says Teranishi. "But I think now we're finally reaching a critical mass of research on the needs of AAPI students."

Making up and moving on Conflict. We explore how to resolve the tiffs that can make a work or school experience harrowing.

Conflict is a part of our day-to-day lives, as unpleasant as it can be. Whether you have a fallout with someone in your class group or you have a conflict with a co-worker or even your boss, a conflict is something that must be resolved as soon as possible in a mature and effective manner so that the problem does not escalate.

Here are five common conflict resolution strategies that can help you know how to approach the situation and go about handling (and, ultimately, resolving) the problem.

Keep in mind that resolving a conflict takes effective communication — regardless of which conflict resolution technique you employ. / GETTY IMAGES/BLEND IMAGES

Collaborate

Collaborative conflict resolution comes in handy when you need to work together to meet the needs of all parties involved. In this type of conflict situation, a very high level of importance is placed on effective co-operation. Use this approach when you know you will be (or are likely to be) dealing with the person or people again.

Accommodate

This type of conflict-resolution strategy should be used when you are willing to meet the needs of others, but at your own cost. This strategy isn't an overly assertive type, but requires a more cooperative approach. Here, a very high level of importance is placed on achieving peace rather than winning. In this case, you have to be willing to give way instead of standing your ground.

Compromise

Extend an olive branch

This type of conflict-resolution strategy should be used when you truly want to ensure that the solution will be satisfactory for all involved. In this scenario, each party involved must be willing to give in on some demands to come to the end solution.

Compete

This type of conflict-resolution strategy can be very useful if you are 100 percent unyielding and unwilling to give in to the other party. Keep in mind that this strategy should only be used when you have a firm stance about the situation and you come from a position of power. Specifically, this strategy will be the most useful in times of emergency, where a decision regarding the most appropriate actions to be taken is required right away.

Avoid

Finally, this type of conflict-resolution strategy should be used when you simply want to avoid the conflict altogether. This is a good approach to use when you are just about at the end of your dealing with that party and will not have to deal with them again. Sometimes, the best thing to do is to simply keep your cool and avoid any problems.

We check in with some of Hollywood's biggest names to see what they've been up to — in their own words, in 140 characters or fewer.

Today, Rob Schneider is vaguely racist, Lena Dunham hit her mom once and Miley Cyrus wigs out.

@RobSchneider: My favorite part of flying on Delta is when they play the safety video and the black guy refuses to help with the emergency exit row.

@lenadunham: I'm a guest at Barnard College graduation today. At my own graduation I sobbed, hit my mother & fell asleep so pretty psyched for a redo.

@MileyCyrus: I've been wearin wigs since I was 12 years old honey

Tanning Mom's video is very gross

Remember Tanning Mom? Of course you do; her terrifying orange mug is permanently seared onto your brain, sort of like mental melanoma. Turns out, though, Tanning Mom's leathery visage isn't the most horrible thing about her. That would be her voice, as inflicted in the new video for her song "It's Tan Mom." Which is more a PSA about the dangers of the sun, prescription pills and thinking you are a celebrity because you were once on TV than it is a song. In it, she slurs about tanning, backdropped by what is either a close-up of the sun or a pit of molten lava she really ought to be hurled into, post haste.

It is possible that James Franco has out-Franco-ed himself. Adding "street artist" to his absurdly lengthy résumé (ever heard of a vacation, bro? Just reading about all the things you do makes me sleepy), Franco has now painted a mural

The second coming?

In a move that will come as a shock to exactly nobody, before performing two new songs on "SNL" on Saturday, Kanye announced that his new album (dropping June 18) will be called "Yeezus." Are we the only ones who are starting to find Yeezy's God Complex sort of boring? We get it, you're a big deal. Like, the hugest deal. If, however, those pesky gay rumors the tabloids are circulating turn out to be true, there may be a case for an immaculate conception situation with Ye and Kim K's unborn spawn.

in Brooklyn. Gawker acquired some photos of Franco tagging a Williamsburg wall with the likenesses of "This Is the End" co-stars Seth Rogen, Jay Baruchel, Jonah Hill, Danny McBride, Craig Robinson and himself on Saturday. Stay tuned for subsequent photos of the mural being covered in graffiti by disgruntled hipsters. We're not pawns in your game of capitalistic self-promotion masked in art, man. Also, go take a nap.

Drake is so busy

Kanye's good buddy Drake is apparently going to be in the new "Anchorman" movie, alongside Lord Yeezy. Drake was photographed on the NYC set of "Anchorman: The Legend Continues" rocking an afro and a pair of mean mutton-chops. Those who doubt that the hip-hop powerhouse can also act would do well to check out early episode of Canadian teen drama "Degraasi: The Next Generation" in which Drake — then Aubrey Graham — played a basketball stud who ends up in a wheelchair. It's some compelling work. No, that's not true, he's not very good at acting. Pretty good rapper, though.

BERENICE BEJO

LOOKING INTO 'THE PAST'

Berenice Bejo first came to American attention with “The Artist,” the retro silent film that earned her an Oscar nomination for Best Supporting Actress. Now she’s in “The Past” (“Le Passe”), the latest from Iranian filmmaker Asghar Farhadi, who is following up his Oscar-winning hit drama “A Separation.” Like that film, “The Past” — which just made its Cannes Film Festival debut, to almost uniform praise — concerns a looming divorce, this time between a French woman (Bejo) and her Iranian husband (Tahar Rahim), who has decided to return to his homeland.

“The Past” is about conflicts between family members and loved ones. Is this something that you can relate to?

This is a film that is so far removed from my life, from my everyday. But at the same time, it's really interesting to play someone who is your total opposite.

Quoted

“Having a translator forces you to listen to what the other person has to say and think about their answer.”

Bejo, on working with director Asghar Farhadi, who doesn't speak her language

It must be an interesting experience working with Asghar Farhadi, considering he requires that his cast begin rehearsing two months before the filming starts. Yes, it's rather destabilizing, because after two months spent rehearsing, I felt like that was it. Our work was done. I didn't think I would have anything left in me! But at the end, what it does is allow you to make it halfway in your journey. Marie [her character] was in me, and I was able to take her even further. It's incredibly liberating.

Asghar Farhadi is known for getting exactly what he wants. Is that true?

Absolutely. Asghar is a choreographer. He carefully orchestrates every single movement, every gesture that would otherwise seem insignificant.

How do you manage on set when you don't speak the same language as the director?

It's rather particular, but I really enjoyed the experience. Having a translator forces you to listen to what the other person has to say and think about their answer. There was a really agreeable atmosphere on set, because we all spent a lot of time observing each other. By the end, Asghar didn't even need to speak in order to understand each other.

Eckhart should erase this from his CV

Thriller. Aaron Eckhart and Liana Liberato are way too good for this Euro-actioner.

The thriller "Erased" begins with a Hitchcockian mistaken-man premise before morphing, by turns, into a "Bourne" film, "True Lies," "Taken," TV's "24" and "Paycheck" (a movie that also featured Aaron Eckhart). It's a Frankenstein monster, built in Europe from the spare parts of proven (or in the case of "Paycheck," unproven) successes, and intended to be sold as an American knockoff. The only thing they got wrong is that it has some personality.

Eckhart stars as Ben Logan, an ex-CIA drone on a job in Belgium. While saddled with his estranged daughter (Lia-na Liberato), Ben discovers that his office has been mysteriously cleared up. Worse, his identity has been excised from all systems. Worse still, men are trying to kill him.

For a nice-guy dad, even one with a CIA past, Ben proves weirdly competent at dispatching baddies, driving cars and even going Jack Bauer on a guy with some good, old-fashioned bathtub waterboarding. Liberato, meanwhile, does her best not to be a completely annoying companion on daddy's trek to regain his identity and kill baddies.

Eckhart is no stranger to projects that are fathoms beneath his talents. But he never coasts. He brings an intensity that makes his character dangerous, especially when viewed through the eyes of a daughter who thought he was a different kind of terrible parent.

"Erased" is often inane, though it's only inane in a bad way when it's wasting Olga Kurylenko as a generic CIA agent tracking Ben from afar. Ditto with an ending that sells the film out in the most anticlimactic way imaginable. Both Eckhart and Liberato deserve better, but at least they deliver better than they were asked to.

'Star Trek' into so-so grosses

Box office. For whatever reason, the latest "Trek" only did kind of well this weekend.

"Star Trek Into Darkness," the newest installment in the classic intergalactic franchise, blasted to the top of movie box office charts with $70.6 million in weekend ticket sales at theaters in the United States and Canada.

The new 3-D voyage for Captain Kirk and the crew of the Starship Enterprise knocked mighty "Iron Man 3" into second place, while the Marvel superhero sequel grabbed $35.2 million. Jazz Age drama "The Great Gatsby" finished third with $23.4 million, according to studio estimates.

Weekend ticket sales for "Into Darkness" failed to reach the level of 2009's "Star Trek," which took in $75.2 million at U.S. and Canadian theaters without a lift from higher 3-D ticket prices.

"Into Darkness," a $190 million production, opened late on Wednesday to grab a head-start on the weekend. The take through Sunday was shy of the $100 million some box office analysts projected.

Zoe Saldana and Zachary Quinto play lovebirds Uhura and Spock in "Star Trek Into Darkness." / ZADE ROSENTHAL

"Iron Man 3" added to its blockbuster sales around the world, reaching $736.2 through Sunday for a global total of $1.07 billion.

Rounding out the top five, dark action comedy "Pain & Gain," released by Paramount and starring Mark Wahlberg, landed in fourth place with takings of $3.1 million. Animated family flick "The Croods" took the No. 5 slot with $2.8 million.

In the U.K. and Ireland, "Fast and Furious 6" brought in $13.8 million this weekend, a record opening for distributor Universal in those territories. The film will open in the United States, Canada and 59 international territories on Friday.

Q&A

"Everything happens for a reason. I believe that what you give to the world, the energy that you give to the world, is what you get back. And it will come back to you if you're not good to it."

Ushkowitz on karma

JENNA USHKOWITZ

The "Glee" actress knows a thing or two about being happy.

'WHAT YOU GIVE ... IS WHAT YOU GET BACK'

Is happiness something that happens to you, or something that you make happen? If you ask "Glee"'s Jenna Ushkowitz, she'll tell you it's the latter. In fact, she's written a book on finding your own glee through the power of positive thinking. "Choosing Glee: 10 Rules to Finding Inspiration, Happiness, and the Real You" is part memoir, part self-help tome and all motivational. The book is Ushkowitz's way of giving back.

"I like to think that positivity is a choice, and you wake up and make a conscious decision," says the 27-year-old actress. And though she admits, "I've never been through any really dark times where I hit rock bottom," she is convinced that her way works. Here, she tells us why we should have a sunnier disposition.

What's this book about?

It's 10 rules that I live by. I like to think that positivity is a choice. I wanted to share that with my fans. There are people who feel that they're the victim. You can turn that around, and change your outlook.

But what about somebody who isn't as fortunate?

You make it a choice, and every day you wake up and say, 'Today I'm going to make the best of every situation and look at every situation with the glass half full.' After awhile, it sort of becomes subconscious and a way of life. It's like a diet. People always say, 'Oh, I'm going to diet for this amount of time,' well, it's actually a lifestyle change you need to make. Can you think of a recent time when you had to make that choice?

I did a pilot, and it got picked up, and I was all

"Choosing Glee" is about making a decision to be happy./GETTY IMAGES excited. And then I got this phone call that they were going to recast me. The first thing I thought was, 'Oh well I'm not a good actor, I'm fat, I'm ugly, they hate me!' [Laughs] And then you turn around and say, 'You know what? It wasn't meant to be.' And it turned out that the reason was that I was too young. So I went to my friends and we vegged out and did our thing, it's like a breakup. But then you get over it. I then went on to book "Spring Awakening," and "Glee." So you have to look at it like, I wouldn't have been able to experience those things.

Vortioxetine closer

Health. A pharm company says that a new drug may improve depression symptoms.

Danish pharmaceutical group Lundbeck and Japanese partner Takeda said on Saturday that data from clinical phase III studies with the antidepressant vortioxetine had shown significant improvement in patients' symptoms.

Lundbeck said in a statement that the trial showed safety levels consistent with previously completed studies at lower doses.

Lundbeck and Takeda submitted vortioxetine, also known as Brintellix, for regulatory approval in the United States and Europe at the end of last year.

Industry analysts at

Studies show vortioxetine improves patient's symptoms. / BRAND X

Deutsche Bank see the new drug having sales potential in excess of $1.5 billion and possibly up to $3 billion a year, although consensus forecasts for 2016 are a more modest $500 million, according to Thomson Reuters Pharma.

Lundbeck hopes the new drug will provide a new source of revenue as its existing antidepressant, Cipralel, sold as Lexapro in the United States and Japan, comes off patent protection. REUTERS

As a member of a generation maligned as self-centered, lazy and perpetually adolescent, David Burstein wrote his new book "Fast Future: How the Millennial Generation is Shaping Our World" to try and set the record straight about today's young adults. Through research and interviews with several of the 80 million American Millennials, Burstein paints a nuanced and optimistic portrait of America's emerging movers and shakers.

You write with more optimism about Millennials than most other people. What drove you to write this book?

For the 2008 election cycle I helped produce a documentary, and have been traveling all over the country showing it at college campuses and registering new voters. A lot of people talked to me about wanting to start an energy company or a business, about doing something about education, or about other problems around them. This is a story that needs to be told. At the same time, I was reading all these stories by people from other generations about how our generation is a generation of narcissists, that we're disengaged, and that's just not what I'm seeing. So I set out to try and tell the story of our generation from the perspective of the people framing it.

I'm curious as to how the

DAVID BURSTEIN

Are Millennials the worst? Maybe not, a new book (written by a Millennial) suggests.

MILLENNIALS CARE MORE

Millennial generation is shaped by the Recession.

While this generation is on track to make less money than our parents, the cost of living is actually decreasing. We have the lowest levels of car ownership, home ownership and childbirth. Young people today don't need as much money as they have needed in the past. I think for the first time, you have a group of people not motivated by money as their No. 1 goal. There is a sense that happiness, fulfillment and community are more important. That is something that is consistently impossible for people of other generations to understand.

Quoted

"I think, for the first time, you have a group of people not motivated by money as their No. 1 goal."

Burstein, about Millennials

How have Millennials adapted the idea of community?

People today are part of so many communities, and they're consistently and constantly connected to all of them. They take old communities with them and join new ones along the way. Because of the Internet, people can be part of communities across state or international lines, so the ability of young people to spread the work they're doing is greater than ever before.

After curtain calls, its good to make rent

Arts. In a business that's all about stage magic, the bottom line is not a fantasy.

No matter how much applause you get at curtain call, it's never been easy to "make it rain" as a performer. Adam Huttler, the founder and executive director of the arts nonprofit Fractured Atlas, says it can be challenge for performers and artists to see the business for what it is: a business.

At talks and events, the company helps guide arts organizations toward the nuts-and-bolts initiatives that can keep them afloat. Huttler will speak tonight at Internet Week NYC.

From the other side of the curtain, actress Cherry Jones is clear about the struggles of getting paid and making art. "It's intoxicating working downtown

Adam Huttler teaches artists about how they can run a successful business. "Crowd-funding is a hot phenomenon right now. Whether or not it continues to exist in this form remains to be seen," he says. / ROSS DEN

— then you have to pay your bills," she says of the artsy lifestyle in the online documentary series "Made Here." The relationship between making money and making art scene is just one of many topics covered in the series' three seasons, including health, raising a family and more.

For Jones, her recurring role on the television show "24" made it possible to do the work in the theater that sustains her artistically. "I don't know anyone left who's done just theater for the last 30 years. But I have overwhelming respect for them if they have," she says, with a laugh.

The issues raised in "Made Here" dovetail with the things Huttler encourages arts organizations to address. Huttler says arts organizations that get real about the bottom line have the biggest shot at seeing their art — and their business — succeed.

But technology like

Kickstarter is good news for the scrappy artists in "Made Here" and beyond, Huttler says: "For the little guy, I think things are looking brighter than they ever have."

Where Opportunity Grows

Horoscope

Taurus | April 21 - May 21. Unless you think for yourself, others will do your brainwork for you. You might not be happy about what they come up with.

Gemini | May 22 - June 20. Think through your moves carefully when it comes to financial dealings. Impulsive behavior will instigate numerous errors.

Cancer | June 21 - July 22. What others think of you might be more important than usual. Be careful not lower the high esteem in which you're now held.

Leo | July 23 - Aug. 22. Follow a previously conceived plan for a project to the letter. On-the-spot changes could seriously gum up the works.

Virgo | Aug. 23 - Sept. 22. By being too inquisitive, you are likely to ask questions whose answers you don't want to hear.

Libra | Sept. 23 - Oct. 22. Success is likely if you continue to use the same methods that have worked well in the past. Making revisions could throw you off course.

Scorpio | Oct. 23 - Nov. 21. Don't let your ego cause you to take an unsupportable position. Your pride can get you in some extremely hot water.

Sagittarius | Nov. 22 - Dec. 21. Matters that affect your earnings must be given top priority. If something frivolous should pop up, put it on the back burner where it belongs.

Capricorn | Dec. 22 - Jan. 20. Even though you might not get the last word in every instance, don't let it frustrate you.

Aquarius | Jan. 21 - Feb. 18. You'll make good progress on your goals, though few will be completed. Be grateful for headway.

Pisces | Feb. 19 - March 20. When socializing with friends, find the balance between cheapness and extravagance.

Aries | March 21 - April 20. A situation that has been souring a close relationship with a friend can be resolved, if you're motivated to do it.

Letters

Article shines light into a dark place

Re: "There's blood on your labels" (Metro, May 16) I was hugely impressed by Metro for printing the article about the true cost of cheap clothing. Almost everyone that takes public transportation reads this paper, but so few really know where our clothes, as well as other products, come from. Now a lot more people are aware.

I know that some people were offended by the pictures. I hope that doesn't serve as a deterrent to run such hard-hitting pieces in the future.

Dan Sensale's letter to the editor commends the story but admonishes the choice of pictures, citing a valid concern for children seeing pictures of dead bodies.

However, I would like to ask Mr. Sensale to think about the children in Bangladesh who had no choice in working in the factory that collapsed, who had no choice in losing a family member, and to think about the children who had no choice in seeing the dead bodies up close and in person.

We have enough fluff and gloss-overs in our everyday lives; what we are sorely lacking in media is sobering reality.

Rangers fall into 2-0 hole in ugly Game 2

NHL playoffs. The Rangers return to New York having to win both home games to hold serve.

Not even Don Draper could spin what happened yesterday afternoon into anything other than a disaster.

The Rangers are two losses away from an unsatisfying end to a season which began with Stanley Cup aspirations after a 5-2 loss to the Bruins in the TD Garden in Game 2 of the Eastern Conference semifinals.

The Bruins lead the best-of-seven series, 2-0. Game 3 is tomorrow night at the Garden.

For all intents and purposes, yesterday's matinee was decided 26 seconds into the third period when Boston's Patrice Bergeron and Brad Marchand hooked up on the Bruins' fourth goal.

Bergeron fired a perfect pass to a driving Marchand and when Dan Girardi momentarily spied Bergeron. In an instant, the Rangers were down 4-2. Milan Lucic added his third of the postseason 12:13 later.

Ryan Callahan and Rick Nash scored the only goals for New York.

DENIS GORMAN
sports@metro.us

What went wrong

1 No defense — Defensemen Dan Girardi and Michael Del Zotto struggled throughout Game 2. Girardi was on the ice for all five Bruins goals, including Brad Marchand's game-deciding marker 26 seconds into the third. Del Zotto was on the ice for four of Boston's five goals. Paired together, Girardi and Del Zotto finished with a minus-4 and a minus-3 rating, respectively.

2 Beginners luck? — Boston rookie defensemen Matt Bartkowski, Dougie Hamilton and Torey Krug have dressed for the first two games due to injuries to regulars Andrew Ference, Dennis Seidenberg and Wade Redden. Instead of forcing the inexperienced blueliners into mistakes, the Rangers have allowed the kids to produce (one goal, three assists and a plus-3 rating) and gain confidence.

3 Power outage — It's not exactly breaking news that head coach John Tortorella is brutally blunt. During his press conference Saturday, Tortorella said the Rangers' power play "stinks." Yesterday, they fulfilled their coach's assessment. The Rangers went 0-for-5 in 9:12 of ice time on the man advantage, and are 2-for-36 on the power play in the playoffs.

Comeback trail

Nadal tops Federer

Rafael Nadal continued his comeback with his biggest win yet. Nadal beat Roger Federer yesterday to claim the trophy at the Italian Open. Nadal dominated, taking the match 6-1, 6-3, for his 20th career win over Federer. He has played in eight tournaments this season and won six after missing seven months with a knee injury.

Red Bulls top Galaxy

The Red Bulls continued their hot streak with a win over cross-country powerhouse L.A. Galaxy.

Tim Cahill scored the lone goal in a 1-0 win in stoppage time on a header at the 91st minute. The win was the fifth in the team's last six games.

NBA. J.R. Smith hopes he can 'retire a Knick'

J.R. Smith disappeared in the Eastern Conference semifinals, but he doesn't want to disappear from the Knicks' roster this offseason.

Smith is a free agent, but said after the Game 6 loss he would like to stay with New York.

"I want to retire a Knick," Smith said. "I don't want to go anywhere else. I love it. I love my teammates. I love my coaches. I was sitting in the locker room looking at my jersey after the game just knowing I don't want to be anywhere else except for in the orange and blue."

The Knicks won't be able to offer Smith a very large deal due to their salary cap situation. METRO

Mets win, Mets win

Mets rally for series win

Daniel Murphy broke a 3-3 tie leading off the eighth inning as the Mets won 4-3 and took the series win in Chicago.

The Mets scored all four of their runs from the sixth inning on, as Travis Wood was dominant through the first five innings. He allowed just two hits over that period and even hit a two-run bomb of his own.

Juan Lagares homered in the seventh inning for the Mets and Scott Rice got the win in relief. METRO

Spurs start conference finals with easy victory

NBA playoffs. San Antonio puts the hurt on Memphis in Game 1 of the Western finals.

right out of the gate, taking a 31-14 lead after the first quarter. The 17-point hole was too much to fight out of for Memphis. While a personal 8-0 run by Grizzlies guard Quincy Pondexter brought his team back to within striking distance with four minutes to play in the third, they never got closer than 62-56.

Manu Ginobili and Matt Bonner answered Pondexter's hot streak with two 3-pointers of their own to give the Spurs a 16-point lead heading into the fourth.

It was a particularly ugly game for the Grizzlies' two post players, who were supposed to have the advantage over the aging Tim Duncan. Marc Gasol and Zach Randolph combined for 17 points on 8-of-24 (33 percent) shooting. Memphis was a shocking minus-28 with Randolph on the floor. The All Star finished the game with two points on 1-of-8 shooting.

No one on the Spurs had a dominating performance — Tony Parker led the team with two points and nine assists — but it was the deep shooting of

Driver in NY
Hello,
I'm looking for a very special person who is educated, responsible, caring, patient, and fun! I'm a very busy person who needs an extra hand and looking for a professional and experienced driver to take up a private assignment, at least 2 year of driving experience and also with a Valid License to help drive my Mom while on 3 months vacation. She's going to be in the State for 3 months. So you will be driving her 3 times a week and for the period of 2hrs-4hrs each day. I have been busy with work lately and I don't have much time to go with her. Days which you will be driving her would be: Monday, Wednesday, Friday, Hours which you will be driving her would be: 10 am - 12noon, 1pm - 3pm. Let me know if these hours are okay with you.

Am providing the car which you will be driving as I need to know if you are familiar with the car and to know if you can handle it.

Here's the Car details:
2007 BMW 5 Series E60
Transmission: Automatic
Details: 2WD, Adjustable Steering Wheel, Air Bags, Air Conditioning, Anti-lock Brakes, CD, Cruise Control, Power Locks, Power Steering, Power Windows, Premium Wheels, Spoiler, Sun/Moon roof.

So am offering you $750 per week, and the continuation of this job depends on how you drive her on the first week. I will be waiting for your timely response as to know who I will recommend to drive my Mom. I sincerely hope to read from you soon. I'm currently in San Diego, California. right now on a special duty from of force. And I will like to make all necessary arrangement prior her arrival.

Thanks and God Bless

Need to pick a managed long-term care plan?

Why ICS is the plan for you: A Checklist

Do you need:

- ✓ a program that will cover the cost of your home care
- ✓ home care that is flexible and dependable
- ✓ your aide to go with you to work or school
- ✓ to keep your personal care assistant
- ✓ someone to help coordinate all of your care
- ✓ to stay with your doctor
- ✓ specialized senior adult services
- ✓ expertise in working with people with physical disabilities
- ✓ specialists in the management of Multiple Sclerosis and Spinal Cord Injury
- ✓ help with your medications to prevent dangerous mix-ups
- ✓ assistance to help you prevent a fall
- ✓ wound prevention or intervention
- ✓ a wheelchair evaluation
- ✓ repair for your scooter or power chair
- ✓ access to women's health care services
- ✓ a social life, classes, activities, fun

If you need any of these items,
Independence Care System may be the plan for you.
Let us tell you how we can help.

With Independence Care System,
you don't have to go it alone.
